Director Business Development f/m

to develop our TRADE INTERNATIONAL community in Frankfurt am Main

We are looking for a bright, dedicated driving force to lead the successful strategic development of our targeted offers for the trade international community. This community comprises large and small media companies or trade publishers from across the world as well as their most important business partners and sector-political stakeholders.

As Director of Business Development, you will secure the core business as well as develop innovative approaches to expand economic activity during the year and at the Frankfurt Book Fair.

Your work will result in the development of a profit-oriented business strategy working with our portfolio of businesses.

You will work with the directors of our different communities as well as with colleagues in marketing and sales who will be your closest allies to develop new opportunities and manage the operational activities resulting from them. Your colleagues will provide you with what you need to know to learn the ropes in this wide and exciting field of work. Then, your job will be to filter this information, prioritise it, and put it to profitable use.

Both strategic and practical business development experience is essential for success. Network contacts from international trade with rights or licensed products are desirable and helpful so you can know what drives our customers forward and what they need to be effective in the future.

Our ideal candidate will be curious, a good listener, and know how to uncover opportunities by asking the right questions. For this, it is vital that you speak native or near-native English as well as fluent German. Additional foreign languages that facilitate your contact with important international markets such as Asia and South America would be an advantage. Most importantly, you must have a business mindset and be able to judge whether a potential investment is worthwhile. This means drawing up business plans and making the case to decision-makers within our company.

If you've read this far you must be thinking: I can do this! At the same time you must realize that we're asking quite a lot of you and you are correct. Working together, however, we can forge a new road ahead and you can be directly involved in the future development of our company--and ultimately the book and media sector as a whole.
